Fluttershy

...yay...

Fluttershy is a Pegasus pony that comes from Cloudsdale, a city in the sky. She is a timid pony who likes to care of her friends and woodland creatures. She is mostly scared of everything even her shadow. She admits she is weak and helpless but as you progress on the series that is a total lie. In her adventures with her friends she learns to help out in their time of need and ends up beating a dragon, a bear, a draconequus, and more creatures of double her size. Even though she is a Pegasus she is afraid of heights and lives in the ground near the Everfree forest. She lives with woodland creatures and mainly seen with her main pet Angel bunny.

Fluttershy, and the other characters on the show are made by Lauren Faust and were inspired by the generation 1 "My Little Pony". Despite its name the generation 4 is a revolution to the other generations. Hasbro's intention was mainly to draw in young girls and their mothers. Yet they failed at doing that brought male viewers, they label them selves as 'Bronies'. They are from several of ages but the epidemic has grown big that male viewers go wild for it. The reason being is that the characters are that they are complex characters with different personalities and backgrounds that they are afraid of. Its not like other generations where its just pony after pony giving each other a party. This one tells a story, and yet keeps it funny.

Why do I like this character out of the other 5? Well mainly its because she is the cute one of the whole show. Each pony represent different personalities but at anytime whenever she acts out of the ordinary it is surprising. Its spontaneous at times but it keeps the story interesting. Like in one episode Twilight, the main protagonist, walks behind her house only to find Flutter shy beating up a bear. This character is fun to follow and on of the greatest shy characters there is.
